MARYLAND WINS! 2021 NAIOP Capital Challenge!

Weishi Zhang, Sharmin Davoodian, John Plachta, Maria Day-Marshall, Ron McDonald and William Christian

A team of four graduate students from the University of Maryland's Colvin Institute of Real Estate Development has won first place in the NAIOP DC I MD 2021 Capital Challenge, an intercollegiate real estate competition for the Washington, D.C. area. UMD's development strategy for a high-profile property in Fairfax County prevailed over proposals from Georgetown University, American University and George Mason University in a nail-biter live presentation on April 23rd.

"After watching the team's mock presentation, I knew that they had a winning proposal," saidMaria Day-Marshall, Director, Colvin Institute of Real Estate Development. "The students were poised and well-prepared to compete in the competition. It was evident that they had worked hard, and I could not be prouder of their efforts. Ron McDonald was a great advisor for these students and used his vast experience in this competition to lead them to the winners circle."
